Chapter 1 by Gallonella

It was a unknown time, dunno if it was day or night, the sky was dark. It was foggy, the field was gray. All the grass in a constant gray colour. In the middle of the field was a white tree without leaves. White, with a light shimmering of pink. A little golden wild flower was climbing up the trunk of the tree, it was blooming red. It was all quiet. I was sitting in the grass, under a dark gray bush, waiting for the rain to stop. I had a black coat, in my arms was laying Malene's brother Adrian. Asleep. Malene was squeezeing to me. She too was in a black coat and wrapped beneath mine aswell to keep her warm. Suddenly a raven flew across the sky. It landed on the tree. I tried to stay quiet so the raven would not notice me. But it did and stared at me with his creepy big eyes. I pressed Adrian and Malene closer to me to protect them. Another raven flew by and sat on the tree, too. And then another. And another. More and moe ravens came and stared at us. I was afraid. Adrian had fever, I felt and saw it. He was breathing hardly. I knew I had no other choise than to flew. I grabbed Malene by her arm and we started to run. I had Adrian in my arms, he was still asleep. The ravens flew in circles above us, following us with their sharp eyes. We ran into a forest. As we were there the mist got thicker, the birds were gone. All trees were big, without leafs and all white. Nothing but trees, not even a bush or something. Last thing I remember is that we reached some mountain far on the horizon. Many dangerous animals were living there but we tried to hide in a cave. Adrian in my arms, Malene snuggled up to me under my coat. Suddenly we were in a dark tunnel. We were walking around the underground cave. It was coming nearer. And
